ELLs face unique challenges when trying to tackle ELA writing requirements of their grade-level TEKS. Participants in this workshop will work with research-based strategies for writing that have been proven effective with ELLs of all proficiency levels. Participants will explore the various structures of writing required by the TEKS, mini-lessons designed to have a memorable impact on ELLs, scaffolded writing structures, along with revising and editing techniques designed to focus on those grammar and convention areas ELLs need most. Participants will learn how to design lesson units that enable reading and writing instruction to flow seamlessly together. This session includes follow-up allowing teachers to bring and discuss post-implementation student writing samples.
